Gary Halbert said it first: write personally. Here is what that looks like on a Nigerian small-business page.

The move: Write personally.

Sound like one person helping another, not a committee.

What that looks like on a Nigerian page:

Before: 'Our organisation provides solutions.'
After: 'We help you make the next step clear.'

The part most people skip: do not steal the words. Steal the structure, then write your own example from your own customer.

Source: The Boron Letters. Attributed, not quoted at length.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

Building a small studio in Lagos means the boring decisions matter most.

This is the contact route.
Profile to link.
Link to WhatsApp.
WhatsApp to a clear brief.

What I have learned building it: the work is rarely the hard part. The hard part is making the message, the website, the content and the follow-up say the same thing.

When they disagree, the customer does not argue. They just go quiet.

So I am posting the process here, including the parts that are still unfinished.
No wahala — that is the point of building in public.

What is the one thing in your business that keeps disagreeing with itself?

SEO works in a week. We put it on trial.

Verdict: False.

Search visibility depends on crawling, competition, content quality and time. A new page is not a ranking promise.

How we would test it:
Check indexing and query data after a reasonable period; do not invent rankings

Keep the useful part. Drop the absolute.

That is the whole method: one claim, one verdict, one test small enough to run
