If your page has gone quiet, it is rarely a lack of talent. It is a lack of a repeatable post.

The move: Self-interest in the headline.

Show the reader why the message matters to them.

What that looks like on a Nigerian page:

Before: 'Our new workbook.'
After: 'Explain what you do in one sentence before you rebuild the website.'

The part most people skip: do not steal the words. Steal the structure, then write your own example from your own customer.

Source: Tested Advertising Methods. Attributed, not quoted at length.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

I keep a rule for this studio: nothing goes out that a person has not checked.

The message: what you do and for whom.
The page: where the next step happens.
The content: how people find and trust you.
The follow-up: what happens after the enquiry.

What I have learned building it: the work is rarely the hard part. The hard part is making the message, the website, the content and the follow-up say the same thing.

When they disagree, the customer does not argue. They just go quiet.

So I am posting the process here, including the parts that are still unfinished.
No wahala — that is the point of building in public.

What is the one thing in your business that keeps disagreeing with itself?

Logo first, message later. We put it on trial.

Verdict: Mostly false.

A logo matters, but customers first need to understand what you do, who it is for and what happens next. Clarity can precede polish.

How we would test it:
Write the one-sentence offer before redesigning the mark

Keep the useful part. Drop the absolute.

That is the whole method: one claim, one verdict, one test small enough to run

A question I asked five business owners this week.

The knowledge sheet is the boundary.

This is why The Everyday AI Prompt Desk exists as a ■5,000 DIY pack: most owners do not need an agency this month. They need the scripts, the tracker and the routine, and they need it before Friday.

I am deliberate about the boundary. It is not custom work. It does not guarantee sales. It helps you convert more of the enquiries you already get.

Saying the limit out loud has cost me nothing and saved a lot of awkward conversations.

What does your price reply say after the number?
