A catering company account in Lagos does not need more ideas. It needs three it can actually shoot this week.

Three posts I would test this week for a catering company business:

1. a menu tasting process
2. a per-head cost breakdown with fictional numbers
3. a dietary-requirement intake form explained

The mistake to avoid: posting only buffet tables.

First action: Show the tasting process.

Why this works: a page that only shows finished work gives a new customer nothing to save and nothing to ask about. Process is what earns the message.

This is a planning example, not a claim that Easywurld manages this account.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

Building a small studio in Lagos means the boring decisions matter most.

What I am testing in the studio this week: draft a newsletter.

→ Input: one useful lesson and one update
→ The draft: a short email with one CTA
→ I check: permission and accuracy
→ Only then: an approved email

The part I will not automate is the check. A machine can write a reply. It should not be allowed to promise a price, a date or a result on my behalf.

That boundary is the product. Everything else is convenience.

Labelled concept work — a sample build, not a client result.

Where would you keep a human in the loop in your own business?

Absolute advice is expensive. Take this one: "Content must look expensive to work."

Verdict: False.

Readable, useful and honest content can outperform polished but vague posts.
Production value should serve the idea.

How we would test it:
Record one clear answer on a phone and compare completion rate

Keep the useful part. Drop the absolute.

That is the whole method: one claim, one verdict, one test small enough to run

The businesses that survive this year are not the loudest.

A trend is a borrowed room. You still have to say something worth hearing.

Copy the structure, never the voice, and check the sound is cleared for business.

Borrow the shape. Keep the meaning.

I am not saying this to sound clever. I have watched good businesses lose a sale in one chat because the reply was a bare number with no next step.

If you sell by WhatsApp or DM, that reply is your shop counter.

Save it for the next time somebody asks "how much?".

Evening thought. The quote workbook keeps the numbers visible.

Is tax advice included? No. Tax rules vary. The workbook has an editable tax-rate cell; confirm what applies to you.

This is why The Proposal & Report Template Pack exists as a ■5,000 DIY pack: most owners do not need an agency this month. They need the scripts, the tracker and the routine, and they need it before Friday.

I am deliberate about the boundary. It is not custom work. It does not guarantee sales. It helps you convert more of the enquiries you already get.

Saying the limit out loud has cost me nothing and saved a lot of awkward conversations.

What is the question customers ask you that you dread answering?
