Harry Dry said it first: make it unique. Here is what that looks like on a Nigerian small-business page.

The move: Make it unique.

If every competitor can say it, find the specific difference.

What that looks like on a Nigerian page:

Before: 'We build websites.'
After: 'We make the message, page, content and follow-up agree.'

The part most people skip: do not steal the words. Steal the structure, then write your own example from your own customer.

Source: Marketing Examples. Attributed, not quoted at length.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

I am building Easywurld in public, and today's decision was meet Easywurld:
Homepage rewrite tour.

A clearer opening.
One audience.
One next step.

What I have learned building it: the work is rarely the hard part. The hard part is making the message, the website, the content and the follow-up say the same thing.

When they disagree, the customer does not argue. They just go quiet.

So I am posting the process here, including the parts that are still unfinished.
No wahala — that is the point of building in public.

What is the one thing in your business that keeps disagreeing with itself?

A chatbot knows your business automatically. We put it on trial.

Verdict: False.

A chatbot needs a maintained knowledge sheet, boundaries and escalation. Without them it can invent answers.

How we would test it:
Write the knowledge sheet and test ten common questions

Keep the useful part. Drop the absolute.

That is the whole method: one claim, one verdict, one test small enough to run this week.
