Most solar installer pages post the finished work and nothing else. That is the whole problem.

The move: Voice consistent, tone flexible.

Keep the brand's character while adjusting tone to the context.

What that looks like on a Nigerian page:

A meme can be dry; a complaint reply should be calm. Both can sound like Easywurld.

The part most people skip: do not steal the words. Steal the structure, then write your own example from your own customer.

Source: Everybody Writes. Attributed, not quoted at length.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

I keep a rule for this studio: nothing goes out that a person has not checked.

The owner who answers the DMs.
The team that needs a clearer page.
The business that has outgrown scattered content.
The founder who wants a system, not noise.

What I have learned building it: the work is rarely the hard part. The hard part is making the message, the website, the content and the follow-up say the same thing.

When they disagree, the customer does not argue. They just go quiet.

So I am posting the process here, including the parts that are still unfinished.
No wahala — that is the point of building in public.

What is the one thing in your business that keeps disagreeing with itself?

Somebody will disagree with this, and that is fine.

Do I need special software? You need Word or a compatible editor, and Excel or Google Sheets for the workbook.

This is why The Proposal & Report Template Pack exists as a ■5,000 DIY pack: most owners do not need an agency this month. They need the scripts, the tracker and the routine, and they need it before Friday.

I am deliberate about the boundary. It is not custom work. It does not guarantee sales. It helps you convert more of the enquiries you already get.

Saying the limit out loud has cost me nothing and saved a lot of awkward conversations.

What is the question customers ask you that you dread answering?
