BATCH 01

What is in this drop, and how to post it

Thirteen pieces of finished content: three carousels, five memes and four videos. Each one has the asset, the caption for both platforms, and tags. Nothing here is a brief — the copy is final, the images are exported, the videos are rendered.

> Post one piece a day rather than all thirteen at once. This is a two-week supply at the Standard cadence, or a week and a half at Full. The point of this batch is to find out which shape earns attention before we build ninety more.

The posting order — why this sequence

The first post must be the strongest hook, not the most important idea. Carousel 1 has the most recognisable pain in the whole library: the customer who asks the price and vanishes. Everyone who sells by chat has lived it.

01 Day 1 — C1 carousel. The pain everyone recognises, solves in three steps, ends on a soft offer.

02 Day 2 — M1 meme. Same idea, comic shape. Proves whether the joke lands.

03 Day 3 — C2 carousel. Switches problem from chat to website. Tests whether the audience follows the pivot.

04 Day 4 — M2 meme. No offer, pure opinion. Should get the most comments.

05 Day 5 — V1 video. First video of the batch, on the proven C1 idea. Same message, different format.

06 Day 6 — M3 meme. Content-about-content. Tests whether owners care about their own marketing.

07 Day 7 — C3 carousel. Landing pages. The most B2B idea in the batch — likely the lowest reach, highest DM rate.

08 Day 8 — M4 meme. Designer humour. Tests the professional audience.

09 Day 9 — V2 video. The five-second test, spoken.

10 Day 10 — M5 meme. Motivation without hype. Good for shares, weak for DMs.

11 Day 11 — V3 video. Landing page idea.

12 Day 12 — V4 video. The chat idea again, one week after C1. Repetition is the point.

> What this batch is testing, precisely: whether a clear, quiet, brand-first design earns saves on Instagram, and whether the same idea in spoken 9:16 earns completion on TikTok. Those are the two numbers that decide how we build batch 02.

The ten-point check, before anything ships

01 Text inside the safe box — for video, nothing above 300px or below 1240px.

02 One terracotta accent per asset. Not two.

03 Copy matches the sheet exactly — no stray placeholder text.

04 No watermark, no other brand’s logo, no stock photo people.

05 Captions burned into video; swipe cue on carousel slides 1–6.

06 Caption written for this platform, not pasted across all three.

07 One clear next step: a keyword, a link, or a save.

08 No guaranteed results, no invented testimonials, no fake numbers.

09 Hook lands in the first three seconds or the first line.

10 File named to the convention: D##_##_TYPE_PLATFORM.

COPY SHEET

Every caption, exactly as posted

Paste these as they are. Change nothing except the phone number if it changes. If you edit, keep the structure: hook line, three value lines, soft offer, question.

C1 · The price is not the problem

INSTAGRAM

The price was never the problem.

Someone asks how much. You send the number. The chat goes quiet — and you assume you were too expensive.

Almost never. What happened is that nothing followed the number. No scope, no timeline, no question. So there was nothing left to reply to.

Three parts fix it:
1· The price
2· One line on what it includes
3· One question that moves it forward

“The Ankara set is ₦18,000, tailored to your size, ready in 5 days. Would you like me to take your measurements now?”

Same price. Completely different ending.

The Chat-to-Customer Playbook has 36 scripts for these moments — price, quotes, silence, payment, follow-up. ₦5,000. Message PLAYBOOK on WhatsApp: 0905 069 0837.

Save this for your next enquiry.

A price on its own is a dead end.

Someone asks how much, you send the number, and the chat goes quiet. Not because the price was wrong — because nothing happened after the number.

Try three parts: the price, what it includes in one line, then one question that moves things forward.

“The Ankara set is ₦18,000, tailored to your size, ready in 5 days. Would you like me to take your measurements now?”

Same price. Completely different ending.

I put 36 of these scripts into the Chat-to-Customer Playbook — ₦5,000, with a tracker so no follow-up gets forgotten. Message PLAYBOOK on WhatsApp: 0905 069 0837.

Which part do you usually skip — the scope line, or the question?

TIKTOK SCRIPT

HOOK (0–3s): “You sent the price. They disappeared.”

BEAT 1 (3–8s): The problem is not the number.

BEAT 2 (8–14s): It is what came after it — nothing.

BEAT 3 (14–22s): Say the price. Say what it includes. Ask one question.

BEAT 4 (22–27s): That question is the whole trick.

CTA (27–30s): 36 scripts. ₦5,000. Message PLAYBOOK.

C2 · The five-second test

INSTAGRAM

Open your site on your phone. Hand it to someone who does not know your business. Give them five seconds. Take it back.

Then ask: what do we sell, who is it for, and what were you meant to do next?

If they cannot answer all three, the problem is the first screen — not the design, the traffic, or the price.

In five seconds a visitor is answering four silent questions: what is this, who is it for, does it solve my problem, what do I do next.

“Welcome to our website” answers none of them.

“Websites for Lagos food businesses, live in 14 days, ₦300,000” answers all four.

The Clear Homepage Blueprint walks through the seven blocks and the exact rewrites — ₦5,000. Message CLEAR on WhatsApp: 0905 069 0837.

Run the test tonight and tell me what happened.

Here is a test that takes thirty seconds.

Open your website on your phone. Hand it to someone who does not know what you do. Give them five seconds. Take it back and ask what you sell.

If they hesitate, that is your homepage problem — and it is a wording problem, not a design problem.

A visitor is answering four questions in those five seconds: what is this, who is it for, does it solve my problem, what do I do next.

Most homepages open with a slogan, a stock photo and “Learn more”. None of those answer anything.

Try this instead: what you sell, who it is for, what it costs, one action.

The Clear Homepage Blueprint has the seven blocks and eight before/after rewrites — ₦5,000. Message CLEAR on WhatsApp: 0905 069 0837.

What would a stranger say your business does, in one sentence?

TIKTOK SCRIPT

HOOK (0–3s): “Hand a stranger your phone for five seconds.”

BEAT 1 (3–8s): Then ask them what you sell.

BEAT 2 (8–14s): Four questions they are answering: what, who, why, next.

BEAT 3 (14–22s): Most homepages answer none of them.

BEAT 4 (22–28s): Sell, who for, price, action. That is the first screen.

CTA (28–32s): The Clear Homepage Blueprint. ₦5,000. Message CLEAR.

C3 · One page, one offer, one action

INSTAGRAM

If your page can do two things, it will do neither.

A website is a library. A landing page is a signpost with an arrow. The moment you add a menu, a second offer or a “other services” section, you have given the visitor somewhere else to go.

The strongest block on any landing page is the one nobody writes: “who this is not for.”

“Websites for Lagos food businesses. Not for restaurants with 20 locations. Send LANDING.”

That line does more work than three testimonials, because it proves you know who you are talking to.

The One-Offer Landing Page Kit has the ten blocks, the headline formulas, and the proof-without-testimonials section — ₦5,000. Message PAGE on WhatsApp: 0905 069 0837.

If your page can do two things, it will do neither.

A landing page is not a small website. A website answers many questions; a landing page answers one, then asks for the sale.

The two reasons pages fail are always the same: they offer more than one thing, and they never actually ask.

Try this. Write down the single action you want. If you cannot say it in four words, the page is not ready.

Then add the block almost nobody writes: who this is not for. It is the fastest trust builder there is, because it proves you know exactly who you are talking to.

The One-Offer Landing Page Kit has ten blocks, headline formulas and the honest urgency language — ₦5,000. Message PAGE on WhatsApp: 0905 069 0837.

What is the one action your page asks for?

TIKTOK SCRIPT

HOOK (0–3s): “If your page can do two things, it will do neither.”

BEAT 1 (3–9s): A website answers many questions. A page answers one.

BEAT 2 (9–16s): Most pages fail for two reasons: too many offers, and no ask.

BEAT 3 (16–23s): The strongest block? “Who this is not for.”

BEAT 4 (23–28s): One offer. One price. One action. Repeated three times.

CTA (28–32s): The One-Offer Landing Page Kit. ₦5,000. Message PAGE.

The “okay, thanks” that is not an “okay, thanks”.

If you sell by chat, you know this exact silence. One extra line fixes it: say what the price includes, then ask one question.

“Cheap” is not a price. It is an apology.

If you discount before anyone asks, you have told the customer the first number was not real — and every number after it is negotiable.

Price the scope. Say what is included. Then hold it.

“I want it to look premium.”

Premium is not a design instruction. It is a feeling — and the feeling comes from clarity, not from gradients.

Ask one question: what does your customer compare you to? That answer is the brief.

Nobody is coming to save your marketing.

Not an app. Not a trend. Not a hack you saw at 1am.

What works is boring and repeatable: one clear offer, one channel, one month of showing up before you judge it.

That is the whole secret. It is just slow enough that most people quit first.
