Most restaurant pages post the finished work and nothing else. That is the whole problem.

The move: Headlines should do a job.

A headline can select the audience and promise a useful reason to keep reading.

What that looks like on a Nigerian page:

Before: 'Welcome to our studio.'
After: 'Websites for Lagos businesses that need clearer enquiries.'

The part most people skip: do not steal the words. Steal the structure, then write your own example from your own customer.

Source: Ogilvy on Advertising. Attributed, not quoted at length.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

Building a small studio in Lagos means the boring decisions matter most.

We help small businesses make the message, website, content and follow-up work together.
That's Easywurld.

What I have learned building it: the work is rarely the hard part. The hard part is making the message, the website, the content and the follow-up say the same thing.

When they disagree, the customer does not argue. They just go quiet.

So I am posting the process here, including the parts that are still unfinished. No wahala — that is the point of building in public.

What is the one thing in your business that keeps disagreeing with itself?

Verdict: Mostly false.

Hashtags may still help categorise content, but they are not a distribution strategy by themselves. Clear hooks, searchable wording and useful content matter more than a large tag block.

How we would test it:
Use three to five specific tags and compare search/discovery insights where available

Keep the useful part. Drop the absolute.

That is the whole method: one claim, one verdict, one test small enough to run

Answer the question clearly.

Two things worth changing this week:
1. Write the next step into the offer, not only the caption.

No thread. No funnel. Just the next step made obvious.

Somebody will disagree with this, and that is fine.

Is this a website build? No. It is a DIY blueprint and templates, not a website build or personal page review.

This is why The Clear Homepage Blueprint exists as a ■5,000 DIY pack: most owners do not need an agency this month. They need the scripts, the tracker and the routine, and they need it before Friday.

I am deliberate about the boundary. It is not custom work. It does not guarantee sales. It helps you convert more of the enquiries you already get.

Saying the limit out loud has cost me nothing and saved a lot of awkward conversations.

What is the question customers ask you that you dread answering?
