The principle is old. The example is ours. David Ogilvy: respect the reader's intelligence.

Three posts I would test this week for a hair salon business:

1. a consultation question that prevents a bad booking
2. a maintenance routine for one style
3. a stylist explaining who a style suits

The mistake to avoid: posting only transformations.

First action: Answer one booking question on camera.

Why this works: a page that only shows finished work gives a new customer nothing to save and nothing to ask about. Process is what earns the message.

This is a planning example, not a claim that Easywurld manages this account.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

Today I chose the slower option. Let me explain why.

What I am testing in the studio this week: plan a follow-up sequence.

→ Input: a labelled sample lead
→ The draft: day-2, day-6 and day-14 reminders with a stop rule
→ I check: consent, timing and whether the lead already replied
→ Only then: a follow-up task list

The part I will not automate is the check. A machine can write a reply. It should not be allowed to promise a price, a date or a result on my behalf.

That boundary is the product. Everything else is convenience.

Labelled concept work — a sample build, not a client result.

Where would you keep a human in the loop in your own business?

Someone will tell you this week: "A viral video means customers." Here is the verdict.

Verdict: False.

Attention is not the same as intent. A video can reach many people who will never buy. Track relevant enquiries and qualified briefs, not only views.

How we would test it:
Add one clear next step and compare enquiry quality across posts

Keep the useful part. Drop the absolute.

That is the whole method: one claim, one verdict, one test small enough to run this week.

I have read enough "how much?" chats to know one thing.

AI does not have a taste problem. It has a memory problem.

It remembers the internet, not your prices, your promises or your limits.

Let it draft. Never let it decide.

I am not saying this to sound clever. I have watched good businesses lose a sale in one chat because the reply was a bare number with no next step.

If you sell by WhatsApp or DM, that reply is your shop counter.

Save it for the next time somebody asks "how much?".

The move: respect the reader's intelligence.

Give facts and a clear proposition instead of empty superlatives.

My own version, written for a Lagos customer:
Before: 'Best digital solutions.' After: 'A one-offer landing page kit with copy templates and a pre-launch checklist.'

I am borrowing the structure from David Ogilvy, not the words. Credit where it is due: Ogilvy on Advertising.

Oya — pick one headline on your page and rewrite it tonight. That is the whole homework.
