Five pages. One week of posting for a skincare brand business. Steal the structure, not the words.

Three posts I would test this week for a skincare brand business:

1. a routine order explained without medical claims
2. an ingredient label read in plain language
3. a customer question routed to a qualified professional when needed

The mistake to avoid: making treatment claims.

First action: Write one plain-language label answer.

Why this works: a page that only shows finished work gives a new customer nothing to save and nothing to ask about. Process is what earns the message.

This is a planning example, not a claim that Easywurld manages this account.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

Building a small studio in Lagos means the boring decisions matter most.

What I am testing in the studio this week: turn a market brief into a checklist.

→ Input: a labelled sample brief
→ The draft: a task list with owners and open questions
→ I check: invented facts and missing approvals
→ Only then: a reviewed production checklist

The part I will not automate is the check. A machine can write a reply. It should not be allowed to promise a price, a date or a result on my behalf.

That boundary is the product. Everything else is convenience.

Labelled concept work — a sample build, not a client result.

Where would you keep a human in the loop in your own business?

Someone will tell you this week: "A free review means free custom work." Here is the verdict.

Verdict: False.

A review can identify a problem and next step. Building, writing or managing the solution is separate scoped work.

How we would test it:
State the review boundary before starting and send a written scope for extra work

Keep the useful part. Drop the absolute.

That is the whole method: one claim, one verdict, one test small enough to run this week.

I have read enough "how much?" chats to know one thing.

Followers are not customers. They are strangers who agreed to keep looking.

The business happens in the message, the call and the second visit.

Count enquiries, not applause.

I am not saying this to sound clever. I have watched good businesses lose a sale in one chat because the reply was a bare number with no next step.

If you sell by WhatsApp or DM, that reply is your shop counter.

Save it for the next time somebody asks "how much?".

Answer the question, then add the next step.

Two things worth changing this week:
1. Write the next step into the offer, not only the caption.

No thread. No funnel. Just the next step made obvious.

I changed my mind about this last month.

AI needs facts, voice and boundaries.

This is why The Everyday AI Prompt Desk exists as a ■5,000 DIY pack: most owners do not need an agency this month. They need the scripts, the tracker and the routine, and they need it before Friday.

I am deliberate about the boundary. It is not custom work. It does not guarantee sales. It helps you convert more of the enquiries you already get.

Saying the limit out loud has cost me nothing and saved a lot of awkward conversations.

What does your price reply say after the number?
