A phone repair shop account in Lagos does not need more ideas. It needs three it can actually shoot this week.

Three posts I would test this week for a phone repair shop business:

1. a diagnostic question before quoting
2. a repair timeline with parts availability
3. a data-privacy promise explained plainly

The mistake to avoid: posting only repaired screens.

First action: Explain the diagnostic step.

Why this works: a page that only shows finished work gives a new customer nothing to save and nothing to ask about. Process is what earns the message.

This is a planning example, not a claim that Easywurld manages this account.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

I keep a rule for this studio: nothing goes out that a person has not checked.

What I am testing in the studio this week: outline a proposal.

→ Input: a labelled sample brief
→ The draft: sections for scope, timeline, price and exclusions
→ I check: invented parties, figures and legal terms
→ Only then: a reviewed proposal draft

The part I will not automate is the check. A machine can write a reply. It should not be allowed to promise a price, a date or a result on my behalf.

That boundary is the product. Everything else is convenience.

Labelled concept work — a sample build, not a client result.

Where would you keep a human in the loop in your own business?

Someone will tell you this week: "Carousels are dead." Here is the verdict.

Verdict: False.

Carousels can still work for checklists, comparisons and step-by-step explanations. They fail when every slide is a paragraph.

How we would test it:
Make one five-slide checklist with one idea per slide

Keep the useful part. Drop the absolute.

That is the whole method: one claim, one verdict, one test small enough to run this week.

“We work with everyone” is not generous. It is invisible.

The narrower the sentence, the louder it reads.

Be specific enough to be chosen.

I am not saying this to sound clever. I have watched good businesses lose a sale in one chat because the reply was a bare number with no next step.

If you sell by WhatsApp or DM, that reply is your shop counter.

Save it for the next time somebody asks "how much?".

Speed to lead is part of the campaign.

Two things worth changing this week:

No thread. No funnel. Just the next step made obvious.

I changed my mind about this last month.

Do you review my page? No. The scorecard helps you audit your own page. A personal review is not included.

This is why The Clear Homepage Blueprint exists as a ■5,000 DIY pack: most owners do not need an agency this month. They need the scripts, the tracker and the routine, and they need it before Friday.

I am deliberate about the boundary. It is not custom work. It does not guarantee sales. It helps you convert more of the enquiries you already get.

Saying the limit out loud has cost me nothing and saved a lot of awkward conversations.

What is the question customers ask you that you dread answering?
