Five pages. One week of posting for a travel agency business. Steal the structure, not the words.

Three posts I would test this week for a travel agency business:

1. a visa-document checklist with official-source links
2. a destination comparison based on verified facts
3. a booking timeline with cancellation terms

The mistake to avoid: posting only destination photos.

First action: Publish one document checklist.

Why this works: a page that only shows finished work gives a new customer nothing to save and nothing to ask about. Process is what earns the message.

This is a planning example, not a claim that Easywurld manages this account.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

I am building Easywurld in public, and today's decision was aI Build: Prepare customer interview questions.

What I am testing in the studio this week: prepare customer interview questions.

→ Input: the offer and audience
→ The draft: ten open questions about problems and language
→ I check: leading questions and privacy
→ Only then: an approved interview kit

The part I will not automate is the check. A machine can write a reply. It should not be allowed to promise a price, a date or a result on my behalf.

That boundary is the product. Everything else is convenience.

Labelled concept work — a sample build, not a client result.

Where would you keep a human in the loop in your own business?

Someone will tell you this week: "Long copy always sells better." Here is the verdict.

Verdict: It depends.

Copy should be long enough to answer the buyer's questions and short enough to keep attention. Awareness and price change the need.

How we would test it:
Match copy length to the buyer's stage and test one variable

Keep the useful part. Drop the absolute.

That is the whole method: one claim, one verdict, one test small enough to run this week.

Every great line you admire is a structure you can learn and a voice you cannot borrow.

Steal the structure. Write your own sentence. Attribute the teacher.

Learn the move, not the words.

I am not saying this to sound clever. I have watched good businesses lose a sale in one chat because the reply was a bare number with no next step.

If you sell by WhatsApp or DM, that reply is your shop counter.

Save it for the next time somebody asks "how much?".

Test clarity before price cuts.

Two things worth changing this week:
1. Write the next step into the offer, not only the caption.
2. Put the price, the contents and the boundary in the same message.

No thread. No funnel. Just the next step made obvious.

The scripts are starting points, not robots.

This is why The Chat-to-Customer Playbook exists as a ■5,000 DIY pack: most owners do not need an agency this month. They need the scripts, the tracker and the routine, and they need it before Friday.

I am deliberate about the boundary. It is not custom work. It does not guarantee sales. It helps you convert more of the enquiries you already get.

Saying the limit out loud has cost me nothing and saved a lot of awkward conversations.

What does your price reply say after the number?
