If your page has gone quiet, it is rarely a lack of talent. It is a lack of a repeatable post.

The move: Make it visual.

Concrete language lets the reader picture the outcome.

What that looks like on a Nigerian page:

Before: 'Improved efficiency.'
After: 'A reply draft ready for your approval before the customer waits another day.'

The part most people skip: do not steal the words. Steal the structure, then write your own example from your own customer.

Source: Marketing Examples. Attributed, not quoted at length.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

Building a small studio in Lagos means the boring decisions matter most.

Design: templates and real assets.
Video: approved avatar or real recording.
Editing: CapCut-style workflow.
Planning: one canonical calendar.

What I have learned building it: the work is rarely the hard part. The hard part is making the message, the website, the content and the follow-up say the same thing.

When they disagree, the customer does not argue. They just go quiet.

So I am posting the process here, including the parts that are still unfinished. No wahala — that is the point of building in public.

What is the one thing in your business that keeps disagreeing with itself?

Marketing myth: Hide the price until DM.

Verdict: It depends.

For simple DIY packs, a clear price can reduce friction. Custom projects may need a range or scoped quote. Hiding everything can waste time.

How we would test it:
Publish the pack price and explain what custom work requires

Keep the useful part. Drop the absolute.

That is the whole method: one claim, one verdict, one test small enough to run this week.

Somebody will disagree with this, and that is fine.

The pre-launch checklist tests the journey.

This is why The One-Offer Landing Page Kit exists as a ■5,000 DIY pack: most owners do not need an agency this month. They need the scripts, the tracker and the routine, and they need it before Friday.

I am deliberate about the boundary. It is not custom work. It does not guarantee sales. It helps you convert more of the enquiries you already get.

Saying the limit out loud has cost me nothing and saved a lot of awkward conversations.

What does your price reply say after the number?
