If your page has gone quiet, it is rarely a lack of talent. It is a lack of a repeatable post.

The move: Features to benefits.

Translate what something is into what it helps the buyer do.

What that looks like on a Nigerian page:

Before: 'XLSX tracker.'
After: 'See who to follow up with today.'

The part most people skip: do not steal the words. Steal the structure, then write your own example from your own customer.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows

Today I chose the slower option. Let me explain why.

After 24 hours: record available metrics.
After seven days: compare similar formats.
After a month: review series and enquiries.
Change one variable.

What I have learned building it: the work is rarely the hard part. The hard part is making the message, the website, the content and the follow-up say the same thing.

When they disagree, the customer does not argue. They just go quiet.

So I am posting the process here, including the parts that are still unfinished.
No wahala — that is the point of building in public.

What is the one thing in your business that keeps disagreeing with itself?

Memes are unprofessional. We put it on trial.

Verdict: It depends.

Original, relevant humour can humanise a brand. Mocking customers or using unclear rights can damage trust.

How we would test it:
Use one original meme that jokes about the work, not the customer

Keep the useful part. Drop the absolute.

That is the whole method: one claim, one verdict, one test small enough to run

Ask what the mark must help people understand.

Two things worth changing this week:

No thread. No funnel. Just the next step made obvious.

A question I asked five business owners this week.

The setup checklist makes the system usable.

This is why The Chat-to-Customer Playbook exists as a ■5,000 DIY pack: most owners do not need an agency this month. They need the scripts, the tracker and the routine, and they need it before Friday.

I am deliberate about the boundary. It is not custom work. It does not guarantee sales. It helps you convert more of the enquiries you already get.

Saying the limit out loud has cost me nothing and saved a lot of awkward conversations.

What does your price reply say after the number?
