Robert Bly said it first: clear call to action. Here is what that looks like on a Nigerian small-business page.

The move: Clear call to action.

Tell the reader exactly what to do next without ambiguity.

What that looks like on a Nigerian page:

'Open the sample and judge the thinking.' 'Message CLEAR to confirm order details.'

The part most people skip: do not steal the words. Steal the structure, then write your own example from your own customer.

Source: The Copywriter's Handbook. Attributed, not quoted at length.

The five pages are attached as a document. Page one is the cover LinkedIn shows on mobile.

Three hours on meet Easywurld: Studio dictionary today. Here is what I got wrong first.

Simplify: make the next step clear.
Optimize: improve what the evidence supports.
Grow: build from a working system.
That is the slogan, explained.

What I have learned building it: the work is rarely the hard part. The hard part is making the message, the website, the content and the follow-up say the same thing.

When they disagree, the customer does not argue. They just go quiet.

So I am posting the process here, including the parts that are still unfinished. No wahala — that is the point of building in public.

What is the one thing in your business that keeps disagreeing with itself?
